

Bonnie Dixon

I tell visual stories and convey insights through my art.

My interest in art began in childhood as a response to vision problems. Recognizing sight, at an early age, as a precious gift which could be lost it became important to me to record and share what I see, feel and think.

My art training includes classes at the University of Maryland, the Corcoran School of Art and Design (G.W.U.), the Torpedo Factory in Alexandria and the Arts Center in Orange, VA. I am currently a member of the Firnew Farm Artists' Circle (FFAC) in Madison County, VA where I share many learning experiences with the group. You can see my older work at their website <https://www.firnewfarmartistscircle.com/> and at www.zhibit.org/edenart.

Due to Covid I have been working at home. If you are interested in seeing my work, asking about commissioned work or talking about art, you can visit me in person by prior arrangement in my rented studio at Hazel River Art and Antiques where masks are required.
