

Nature, color, details and music inspire my paintings, which can turn out to be realistic, imagined or both. Whatever the style, I like to portray the beauty of all of nature's creatures and creations, real or imagined, big or small, to remind us of the important part each of them contribute to the existence and preservation of our environment. I usually start with a random color scheme and then let my feelings, imagination and intuition, or even the shape of clouds, guide me to a finished painting.

Thank you very much,
Anita
