As a photographer I have explored various styles and themes. I feel a great portion of photography is fantasy. The photographer selects and eliminates to control what is seen, uses the qualities of light to sway emotions, adds and removes objects. Final images may be whimsical or somber. Whimsy is fun, fun for me and hopefully fun for the viewer. Also it implies levity, even humor. Somber strikes a more serious note though not necessarily a reality. Both can convey an air of mystery and wonder. I am not trying to make normal sense, rather I want to stimulate questions and challenge the senses.
